Special issue on Respiration and the Airway

The British Journal of Anaesthesia is pleased to announce the publication of a special issue on Respiration and the Airway to coincide with WAMM 2019, the second World Airway Management Meeting in Amsterdam, 13-16 November. Complications associated with airway management are still the largest cause of anesthesia-related death or permanent brain damage, and the incidence of serious adverse outcomes associated with airway management is much higher outside operating rooms.

Since BJA published a special issue on Airway Management in 2016, there have been several major new developments in the field of airway management such as videolaryngoscopy and high-flow nasal oxygenation for difficult airway management. There have also been significant advances in mechanical ventilation and oxygen therapy. We consider it timely to publish a special issue on these topics. The deadline for submissions is 31 December 2019 with anticipated publication in early 2020. As the affiliate journal of the World Airway Management Meeting, we will also publish the top abstracts selected from WAMM 2019. Please submit manuscripts for peer review, including original clinical and laboratory research, review articles and editorials to <https://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/bja>, indicating in the cover letter that the submission is for the Respiration and the Airway Special Issue.
